

Obligations of Leadership

1. To ensure that the leadership team has access to a common stream of information from members that allows them to understand their views of the world.
2. To provide a coherent stream of information back to members that allows them to understand not just what decisions have been made, but why.
3. To bridge the gap between the members' views of the world and the views held by those who seek to earn the right to lead them.
4. To understand that in voluntary organizations, people choose to engage because they perceive that it is in their own self interest to do so.

Robert B. Duncan
Broad College of Business